Sasha Hadden wrote and directed A Few Small Dramas as a staff development project while he was employed in the Art Department of the Australian Film Television and Radio School. He funded the film himself, partly through a pre-sale to the Network Ten childrens series House of Fun, and it was licensed to Katholisches Filmwerk for non-theatric distribution in Germany, Austria and Switzerland. To our understanding, the film recouped its cash budget and is one of few short films to go into clear profit.

It was very successful at film festivals, winning Best Live Action Short under 10' at the Chicago International Childrens Film Festival in 1994 and the Primary Student Panel Award at the 1995 Australian Teachers of Media (ATOM) Awards. It later screened on SBS television as part of the Festival of Television for Australian Children

A Few Small Dramas is a great example of a short film which can be appreciated by both children and adults and shows Sasha's skill in working with children.

Yours faithfully
